

About Evelio Medina

Miami-based Cuban-American life long republican, Evelio Medina is a consummate entrepreneur, with vast experience in operating within the public, private and not-for-profit sectors. He can be described in one word, “passionate”. At an early age, Evelio became a public servant (City of Hialeah Councilman), a small business owner and relentless relationship builder.

For the past seven years, Evelio is founder, president and C.E.O. for the Downtown Miami & Brickell Chamber of Commerce, which serves as a platform to empower, represent and create economic development opportunities for its members and the community as a whole. Evelio's experience has taken him to the White House and to serving the less fortunate at Camillus House (a homeless shelter), affording him the ability to have the common touch, that of understanding and being able to interact with his fellow men and women in effective and efficient manner. His guiding principle is that it is in giving that we receive.

Evelio Medina's knowledge and education base comes from his studying business, marketing, accounting, and real estate on a local, national, and international dimension. All these attributes uniquely qualify him to prosper and thrive in the world we live today.

Evelio's God given talents to interact and understand people and what motivates them, fits perfectly in implementing successful strategies to accomplish the goal of bringing the Project he is working on to a national and international stage.

His passion to serve his community and his country is his driving force.
